THE PRIMARY ELECTION.

Medina County voters refused to get excited over the primary, as the above tabulation of a part of the vote clearly shows. Only about fifty per cent of the possible vote went to the polls. When the large vote in the Devine Commissioner precinct, brought out by several local contests, is eliminated the percentage in the rest of the county is much smaller. Medina County gave O'Daniel, the winning gubernatorial candidate, 1103 votes, a decided majority over all opponents.

There will be a run-off in August between Brooks and Stevenson for Lieutenant Governor; between Mann and Woodul for Attorney General; Sadler and Terrell for Railroad Commissioner; while McDonald and Giles will contest for the office of Land Commissioner.

The race for Comptroller, Treasurer, Superintendent of Instruction and Commissioner of Agriculture being decided in favor of the present incumbents, are not tabulated here, as well as some others are omitted. The race for County Attorney was very close, and it took the complete returns before the winner could be determined.

Twenty-four absentee votes were polled before the election. The County Executive Committee is called to convene at 2 o'clock tomorrow at the county courthouse to canvass the returns and declare the result. Elstone box, precinct No. 18, did not open the polls.

MRS. F. M. DUNCAN COMPLIMENTED.

One of the lovely post-nuptial courtesies extended Mrs. F. M. Duncan, formerly Miss Bernice Chancy and a recent bride, was the shower and reception from 7:30 to 9 o'clock Friday evening, July 22, at the home of Mrs. A. H. Schweers. Hostesses were Mesdames J. A. Horger, D. H. Fly, L. J. Brucks, V. P. King, T. C. Barnes, A. H. Schweers, and M. N. Murrill and Miss Frances Finger.

Bridal white was used in all appointments, summer blossoms decorating the living room and dining room. Receiving the guests were Mrs. Schweers, Mrs. Duncan and her mother, Mrs. J. Roland Chancy. Miss Genevieve Brucks was in charge of the white satin covered bride's book.

The refreshment board was laid with a lace cloth and centered with a crystal bowl of white flowers. White tapers in crystal holders lighted the table. Pineapple punch and heart-shaped cakes iced in white were served. Mrs. Murrill and Miss Finger served the first hour, Mrs. Barnes and Mrs. King the second, and Mrs. Brucks and Mrs. Horger the final hour.

Mrs. Schweers wore a black chiffon gown accented with a large floral pattern and her corsage was of orange and yellow baby zinnias. The honoree's simple frock was of peach colored chiffon and her flowers were also dwarf zinnias. Mrs. Chancy wore white lace with pastel colored summer flowers.

There were eighty-five guests invited.

CASTROVILLE ELECTION CONTEST HEARD IN SPECIAL COURT SESSION.

A special term of the District Court of Medina County was called by Hon. K. K. Woodley, judge of the 38th Judicial District, at 10 o'clock A. M., Wednesday, July 27, at Hondo. Will F. Naegelin et al. vs. H. E. Haass, County Attorney, et al., growing out of the Castroville school bond election held recently. No jury being demanded, the Court heard the arguments presented by the contestants and the contestees. It was ordered and decreed by the Court that the contestants are not entitled to the cause prayed for and that all costs of the proceeding be taxed against them. To this judgment the contestants excepted and gave notice of appeal to the Court of Civil Appeals for the Fourth Supreme Judicial District of Texas, sitting in San Antonio. As we go to press, the contestants have not filed for a new trial.

Attorney Joe E. Briscoe represented the contestants and Attorney L. J. Brucks was counsel for the contestees.

The special term of court will be open through Saturday, July 30th.

HAVE NARROW ESCAPE.

Bru Miller and his young cousin, Jerry Proll, riding in a tank-truck, and Leslie Earl Holloway, his younger brother, William Horace, and Monroe Langford, riding in a Chevrolet sedan, narrowly escaped death about 11:30 Thursday morning, July 28, when the two vehicles met in collision near the L. Morris home in Southeast Hondo. It is alleged by eye witnesses of the accident that the truck, driven by Bru Miller, was headed South and on trying to turn east at the corner was hit almost broadside by the passenger car, being driven east by the eldest Holloway boy. As the truck turned over and came to rest on its top, the heavy rear end swung around to smash into the left side of the auto.

All occupants were badly shaken up, but young Jerry Proll alone was hurt, as he sustained a severe bruise on his foot. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. August Proll of San Antonio here on a vacation visit.

The truck was not greatly damaged but the sedan was badly smashed in front and along the left side. The fire truck was called out to stand by in case of fire. The tank truck was loaded with 305 gallons of gasoline and as the engine remained running for some minutes after the wreck there was grave danger of fire.

Both drivers say they were unable to see the other because of trees.

CORN SHIPMENTS BEGIN EARLY.

L. F. Grube, grain and feed merchant, shipped the first car of new corn for the season on Friday, July 22nd, about three weeks earlier than last year's first shipment, August 13, 1937. Mr. Grube paid 50c for the first car and it tested a moisture content of only 11 per cent notwithstanding the earliness of the harvest.

Mr. Grube has bought two more cars since, the third one going out today following the other two.

At last report the price had dropped to 42c, bringing disappointment to many of the growers. The low price is thought to be due to the large carry-over of old corn from the crop of 1937 and the prospects for a large crop in the corn belt.

Medina County's corn crop is large and of fair quality, notwithstanding the June drought cut both quantity and quality somewhat. The dry weather of the last eight weeks accounts for the crop's early maturity.

NOTICE TO TRACTOR OWNERS.

Notice is hereby given to all owners and operators of tractors and heavy farm machinery that the crossing over bridges or traveling along paved highways or streets or crossing such highways or streets, when such machinery is equipped with cleats or lugs on wheels, is prohibited by law unless such bridges, highways or streets be "planked" and crossing effected by use of such "planked" passway.

Your observance of this law is requested by the MEDINA COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

PUBLIC SERVICE COMPANY TO HOLD SECOND DEMONSTRATION.

The second of a series of free demonstrations of the modern General Electric all-electric kitchen, by the South Texas Department of the San Antonio Public Service Company, will be held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in the local display room. Miss Alyce Strange, who successfully featured the General Electric equipment at the first demonstration held last Friday afternoon, will again be in charge. She will actually prepare and cook foods in the all-electric kitchen on display.

Last Friday, following the demonstration before a large crowd of interested homemakers, prizes were awarded. The main prize, a handsome student lamp, was presented Mrs. H. B. Hubert. The foods prepared by the home economist were also given away, as follows:

CARD OF THANKS.

I want to take this opportunity to thank the voters of Medina County, for their support in my race for the Democratic nomination to the office of County Attorney.

FRANK K. VANCE.

RECENT BRIDE HONORED.

A courtesy extended Mrs. Adolph Lutz, who was Miss Irene Lebold before her recent marriage, was the miscellaneous shower from 4 to 6 o'clock Friday afternoon, July 22, in St. John's Parish hall. Hostesses were Mesdames Raymond Wolff, Clyde Abbott, August Lutz, and Andrew Braden, and Miss Jo Lebold and Mary Belle Embrey.

The hall was decorated with baskets of golden yellow flowers and fern. Yellow was also carried out as the color scheme of the other appointments. While Miss Nora Karver played the wedding march, Mrs. Lutz preceded by little Misses Annie Marie Braden and Norma Wolff, entered the hall and took her place on the flower decorated platform. The honoree wore her bridal gown of white lace over satin and the little maids, who served as flower girls in her wedding, wore their frocks of yellow net over taffeta.

After displaying the many pretty gifts, and the honoree had thanked the donors, the hostesses served refreshments of brick ice cream and cookies.

The white satin covered heart-shaped bride's book was in charge of Miss Jo Lebold, who wore an attractive pink lace frock.

BILLIONS AND THEN WHAT?

By Clayton Rand

Three billion dollars for lending and spending and to provide a political slush fund has been appropriated by Congress.

They can call it "priming the pump", but three billions looks more like blowing up the dam and opening up the flood gates.

When it is all spent we shall find ourselves just exactly where we were after our spending spree was over—with billions more for our children to pay and an economic headache.

There is enough money, manpower, common sense and salesmanship left in the country to produce prosperity if government would get back to normal rations and give the people a chance to do the job.

We have hard times when the credit of men becomes impaired, but when the government's credit goes on the bum we have catastrophe.

CHAPTER X

Facing Trial.

A distinct sensation ran through the Woodruff school, but the schoolmaster and a group of five boys and three girls engaged in a very unclass-like conference in the back of the room were all unconscious of it. The geography classes had recited, and the language work was on. Those too small for these studies were playing a game under the leadership of Jimmie Slims, who had been promoted to the position of weed-seed monitor.

The game was forfeits. Each child had been encouraged to bring some sort of weed from the winter fields—preferably one the seed of which still clung to the dried receptacles—but anyhow, a weed. If any pupil brought in a specimen the name of which he himself could not correctly give, he paid a forfeit. If a specimen was brought in not found in the school cabinet—which was coming to contain a considerable collection—it was placed there, and the task allotted to the best penman in the school to write its proper label. All this caused excitement, and not a little buzz—but it ceased when the county superintendent entered the room.

For it was after the first of January, and Jennie was visiting the Woodruff school.

The group in the back of the room went on with its conference, oblivious of the entrance of Superintendent Jennie. Their work was rather absorbing, being no more nor less than the compilation of the figures of a cow census of the district.

"Altogether," said Mary Talcott, "we have in the district one hundred and fifty-three cows."

"I don't make it that," said Raymond Simms. "I don't get but a hundred and thirty-eight."

"The trouble is," said Newton Brown, "that Mary's counting in the hall herd of Shorthorns."

"Well, they're cows, ain't they?" interrogated Mary.

"Not for this census," said Raymond.

"Why not?" asked Mary. "They're the prettiest cows in the neighborhood."

"Scotch Shorthorns," said Newton, "and run with their calves."

"Leave them out," said Jim, "and tomorrow, I want each one to tell in the language class, in three hundred words or less, whether there are enough cows in the district to justify a co-operative creamery, and give the reason. You'll find articles in the farm papers if you look through the card index. Now, how about the census in the adjoining districts?"

"There are more than two hundred within four miles on the roads leading west," said a boy.

"My father and I counted up about a hundred beyond us," said Mary. "But I couldn't get the exact number."

"Why," said Raymond, "we could find six hundred dairy cows in this neighborhood, within an hour's drive."

"Six hundred!" scoffed Newton. "You're crazy! In an hour's drive?"

"I mean an hour's drive each way," said Raymond.

"I believe we could," said Jim. "And after we find how far we will have to go to get enough cows, if half of them patronized the creamery, we'll work over the savings the business would make, if we could get the prices for butter paid the Wisconsin co-operative creameries, as compared with what the centralizers pay us, on a basis of the last six months. Who's in possession of that correspondence with the Wisconsin creameries?"

"I have it," said Raymond. "I'm hectographing a lot of arithmetic problems from it."

"How do you do, Mr. Irwin!" It was the superintendent who spoke.

Jim's brain whirled little prismatic clouds before his vision, as he rose and shook Jennie's extended hand.

"Let me give you a chair," said he.

"Oh, no, thank you!" she returned. "I'll just make myself at home. I know my way about in this schoolhouse, you know!"

She smiled at the children, and went about looking at their work—which was not noticeably disturbed, by reason of the fact that visitors were much more frequent now than ever before, and were no rarity.

Certainly, Jennie Woodruff was no novelty, since they had known her all their lives. Most of the embarrassment was Jim's. He rose to the occasion, however, went through the routine of the closing day, and dismissed the flock, not omitting making an engagement with a group of boys for that evening to come back and work on the formalin treatment for smut in seed grains, and the blue-vitriol treatment for seed potatoes.

"We hadn't time for these things," said he to the county superintendent, "in the regular class work—and it's getting time to take them up if we are to clean out the smut in next year's crop."

They repeated Whittier's Corn Song in concert, and school was out.

Since that Christmas afternoon when Jennie had undertaken to follow Mr. Peterson's advice and line Yim Irwin up, Jim had gone through an inward transformation. He had made up his mind that he would marry Jennie Woodruff. He saw her through clouds of rose and pink; but she looked at him as at a foolish man who was making trouble for her, chasing rainbows at her expense, and deeply vexing her. She was in a cold official frame of mind.

"Jim," she said, "I want you to give up this sort of teaching. Can't you see it's all wrong?"

"No," answered Jim, in much the manner of a man who has been stabbed by his sweetheart. "I can't see that it's wrong. It's the only sort I can do. What do you see wrong in it?"

"Oh, I can see some very wonderful things in it," said Jennie, "but it can't be done in the Woodruff district. It may be correct in theory, but it won't work in practice."

"Jennie," said he, "when a thing won't work, it isn't correct in theory. But my theory is correct, and it works."

"But the school board are against it."

"The school board elected me. They stood by and saw the contract signed," said Jim, "and—yes, Jennie, I know I am dealing in sophistry! I got the school by a sort of shell-game, which the board worked on themselves. But that doesn't prove that the district is against me. I believe the people are for me, now, Jennie. I really do!"

Jennie rose and walked to the rear of the room and back, twice. When she spoke, there was decision in her tone—and Jim felt that it was hostile decision.

"As an officer," she said rather grandly, "my relations with the district are with the school board on the one hand, and with your competency as a teacher on the other."

"Has it come to that?" asked Jim. "Well, I have rather expected it."

His tone was weary. The Lincolnian dined in his great, sad, mournful mouth accentuated the resemblance to the Martyr President. Possibly his feelings were not entirely different from those experienced by Lincoln at some crisis of doubt, misunderstanding and depression.

"If you can't change your methods," said Jennie, "I suggest that you resign."

"Are you to be called upon to suggest that?" asked Jim.

"A formal complaint against you for incompetency," she replied, "has been lodged in my office, signed by the three directors. I shall be obliged to take notice of it."

"And do you think," queried Jim, "that my abandonment of the things in which I believe in the face of this attack would prove to your mind that I am competent? Or would it show me incompetent?"

Jennie was silent.

"I guess," said Jim, "that we'll have to stand or fall on things as they are."

Jennie had drawn on her gloves, and stood ready for departure.

"Unless you resign before the twenty-fifth," said she, "I shall hear

"Unless You Resign I Shall Hear the Petition for Your Removal."

the petition for your removal on that date. I bid you good evening!"

"Incompetency!" The disgraceful word, representing everything he had always despised, rang through Jim's mind as he walked home. He could think of nothing else as he sat at the simple supper which he could scarcely taste. Incompetent! He was incompetent. He picked up a pen, and began writing. He wrote, "To the Honorable the Board of Education of the Independent District of —"

And he heard a tap at the door. His mother admitted Colonel Woodruff.

"Good evening, Colonel," said Jim.

"Take a chair, won't you?"

"No," replied the colonel. "I thought I'd see if you and the boys at the schoolhouse can't tell me something about the smut in my wheat. I heard you were going to work on that tonight."

"I had forgotten!" said Jim.

"I wondered if you hadn't," said the colonel, "and so I came by for you. I was waiting up the road. Come on, and ride up with me."

The colonel had always been friendly, but there was a new note in his manner tonight. He was almost deferential. He worked with the class on the problem of smut. He offered to aid the boys in every possible way in their campaign against scab in potatoes. He suggested some tests which would show the real value of the VALLEY FOLK REALIZE NEED OF TRANSVERSAL ROAD.

In furtherance of the farm-to-market road system and at the same time providing a by-pass that will enable much traffic to avoid the crowded condition of San Antonio, representatives from six or eight suburb communities gathered at Castrovilla Thursday night of last week to consider ways and means for the construction of a road from Bandera through the Medina Lake area to intersect Highway 81 and from Lytle through Poteet to Pleasanton to intersect State Highway 66.

Such a road, it was pointed out, would serve more than one useful purpose. First of all it would provide a convenient way for bringing hundreds and hundreds of tons of farm products to market, which is now impossible during wet seasons. The road through the Medina Lake region would serve many corn growers who ship a greater part of their crops from LaCoste. It would also serve a useful purpose as a farm-to-market road in getting tons and tons of perishable vegetables out of the irrigated districts around Lytle, Poteet, and Pleasanton and, at the same time, would provide a short-cut for through traffic from the south to west.

When the good road enthusiasts gathered at Castrovilla Thursday evening, it was found that every community along the route was not only represented in the meeting but that all delegates came armed with assurance that each and every community was ready and willing to join hands in putting across the proposed road. C. H. Troell, vice-president of the Bandera and Pleasanton Road Association, presided over the meeting and W. N. Saathoff, manager of the Castrovilla Chamber of Commerce, explained the aims and purposes of the called meeting. C. A. Tunnell served in capacity of secretary.

After thorough discussion of the proposed road, it was decided to name a committee of three to draw up resolutions and petitions to the various communities for signatures before presenting same to the state highway department. Mr. Saathoff assured the visitors that Castrovilla was deeply interested in the proposed road and Dr. T. P. Ware of Poteet declared that Poteet is ready and willing to go the limit for roads. Zack Pruett pledged hearty co-operation on the part of Lytle citizens.

Chas. Troell said Pleasanton had long been working for just such a road. The Rio Medina and Medina Lake community were represented by A. F. Rihn, Fred Christilles and Ed. Seekatz and Mrs. Fred Christilles. John C. Biediger, Matt Bader and Robert J. Mangold of LaCoste pledged cooperation. Alfred Schott of Riverside wanted a road.

A letter from Congressman West to Fred Christilles of Medina Lake gave assurance that he would aid in every way possible.

A committee composed of W. N. Saathoff, J. C. Biediger and C. A. Tunnell was named to draw up resolutions and petitions for immediate treatment. The boys were in a glow of pride at this co-operation with Colonel Woodruff. This was real work! Jim and the colonel went away together. It had been a great evening.

"Jim," said the colonel, "can these kids spell?"

"I think," said Jim, "that they can outspell any school about here."

"Good," said the colonel. "How are they about arithmetic and the other branches? Have you sort of kept them up to the course of study?"

"I have carried them in a course parallel to the textbooks," said Jim, "and covering the same ground. But it has been vocational work, you know—related to life."

"Well," said the colonel, "if I were you, I'd put them over a rapid review of the textbooks for a few days—say between now and the twenty-fifth."

"What for?"

"Oh, nothing—just to please me. . . . And say, Jim, I glanced over a communication you have started to the more or less Honorable Board of Education."

"Yes?"

"Well, don't finish it. . . . And say, Jim, I think I'll give myself the luxury of being a wild-eyed reformer for once."

"Yes," said Jim, dazed.

"And if you think, Jim, that you've got no friends, just remember that I'm for you."

"Thank you, Colonel."

"And we'll show them they're in a horse race."

"I don't see . . ." said Jim.

"You're not supposed to see," said the colonel, "but you can bet that we'll be with them at the finish; and, by thunder! while they're getting a full meal, we'll get at least a lunch. See?"

"But Jennie says," began Jim.

"Don't tell me what she says," said the colonel. "She's acting according to her judgment, and her lights and other organs of perception, and I don't think it fitting that her father should try to influence her official conduct. But you go on and keep your nerve. I haven't felt so much like a scrap since the day we stormed Lookout mountain. I kinder like being a wild-eyed reformer, Jim."

BADERS RETURN FROM TOUR OF NORTHWEST.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Bader and Miss LaVerne Rihn arrived home Tuesday after a 26-day trip through the northwest. They first stopped at El Paso where they visited for a day with Mr. and Mrs. Joe Finger and then toured New Mexico and on to Colorado, making their next stop at Colorado Springs at the foot of Pike's Peak. They enjoyed a short stay about the Springs with some few side trips every day that took them to some place of interest.

From Colorado Springs they journeyed on to Denver and up the mountain range to Wyoming and Montana for a tour of Yellowstone Park. The famous national park afforded many interesting scenes and enjoyed every minute of the trip.

In Montana the Baders were on through the park.

The Mount Chester drive and went through regions where there was snow five feet deep and it was sleeting as they drove through the region.

This was on July 7th. Mr. Bader reports Montana crops considerably backward this year, the corn is only eight or ten inches high. In Nebraska and Kansas the wheat crop was not more than a half crop and the growers are enjoying their first roasting cars. However, conditions are good for a big corn crop. They traveled 4,523 miles without even a flat.

On the return trip they came back by way of Nebraska where they visited with Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Mueller. Mrs. Mueller is a niece of Mr. Bader's and they were pleased to have the Texans for a visit. Dropping down into Kansas they enjoyed a five-day visit with Mr. and Mrs. Emil Volkman, who have spent several winters at Three Point with the Baders.

On last Sunday they were entertained with a chicken dinner by Mrs. Fred Wideman and Mrs. Emma Johnson and Mrs. Al Harding and daughter, Wichita, Kansas and Mr. and Mrs. Emil Volkman and sons, Emil and Oak.

Leaving the home of Mr. and Mrs. Volkman, they came on through Oklahoma, stopping here there for a look-see at different places. Arriving home last Tuesday the trappers found the weather bit warmer as compared with Colorado. They declared they had most delightful time and many places of interest in the ferent states.

"NOBODY'S BUSINESS."

By Julian Capers, Jr.

The opinions here expressed are the author's own and not necessarily those of the Herald.—M. E.

ST. JULY 25.—Now that the tangle and shouting are over, and Texas recovering from its surprise at the incredible feat of Wilbert Lee O'Daniel, flour broker, master salesman, radio personality par excellence, and Democratic nominee for Governor of Texas by virtue of a precedent-shattering victory over a field of 11 opponents, it is time to take a look at the future and speculate a bit on what lies beyond Jan. 17, 1939, when O'Daniel takes over.

Political analysts, surprised only by the magnitude of O'Daniel's victory, because virtually all of them had swung to the belief a week before election that he would be high in the race, explained the Hill Billy victory as another manifestation of that periodic unrest and dissatisfaction which causes the American people to rise in their might and smite the established order of things.

O'Daniel's rise from political obscurity into the Governor's chair in a few short weeks marks the first time a new Governor has been elected without a staff election since the double primary system was established in 1907.

O'Daniel's Promises

The new Governor has talked very little about the government, because, he said, he knows very little about it.

He has definitely promised his 500,000 adherents, however:

1. That he will abolish the poll tax; 2. That he will pay a $30 a month pension to everybody, regardless of age, need, who qualifies otherwise; 3. That he will reduce government expenditure.

The poll tax can be abolished in Texas by a vote of the people, pending the constitution. If O'Daniel can persuade the Legislature to submit such an amendment, it could be effectuated before the 1940 primary elections.

But unfortunately, O'Daniel, although he says that he knows how to get along with folks, has been ridiculing and berating the Legislature throughout his campaign. That is not calculated to evoke cooperation. And he will find a great many Democrats, in the Legislature and out, who firmly believe that the constitutional provision requiring voters to purchase poll taxes is a good one, and ought to remain. Of course, the Legislature might regard O'Daniel's overwhelming victory as a "mandate from the people," but on the other hand, the professional politicians who constitute the majority of the Legislature know that the periodic outbreaks of hysteria such as the O'Daniel landslide subside quickly. The "plain people" who aroused interest made possible the O'Daniel victory will be back at their everyday jobs in a little while, leaving their government to those they have elected.

Pension Data

The pension promise probably will prove the most embarrassing problem O'Daniel will find in his lap after he takes the oath of office. There are about 250,000 persons over 65 in Texas who can qualify. Payments of $30 a month to each of them will total around $90,000,000 a year. Under O'Daniel's promise, the State of Texas will have to carry all of the pension burden, without Federal aid, because under the regulations of the Federal Social Security Board, the U. S. agency will not participate in any State pension program not based upon need, which pays a fixed equal sum to all who qualify as to age. At present, the State is pensioning about 112,000 people, with an average monthly payment of between $12 and $13 each. The total annual cost is about $18,000,000, of which the State pays about $9,000,000 and the Federal Government about the same amount. There is money in sight to continue these payments until January 1. Mr. O'Daniel will have need to find all his reputed business ability to find a place to raise the $80,000,000 a year he will need, to carry out his program. Mountain music won't do it.

Other Races

The election held other surprises besides the Governor's race. P. Pierce Brooks, the Dallas real estate man, who was a fifth flight candidate for Governor in 1936, led the veteran Coke Stevenson by more than 20,000 votes for Lieutenant Governor, and will run it off with Stevenson.

Jerry Sadler, East Texas oilman, who profited by O'Daniel's example, and got himself a hill Billy vote, went into a runoff with the veteran Railroad Commission Chairman, C. V. Terrell. Bill McDonald, Land Commissioner, faces a runoff with Bascom Giles, but Agriculture Commissioner McDonald defeated his rival without a runoff. Gerald C. Mann, of Dallas, ex-Secretary of State, was a close second to Walter Woodul of Houston, lieutenant governor, for Attorney General, and goes into the runoff with Woodul. The powerful political machines of L. A. Woods, State Superintendent of Education, and George Sheppard, rode out the storm, and both went back without runoff, as did Treasurer Charley Lockhart.

SO NEAR AND YET SO FAR

Judges Hit By Storm

Two high court judges—Richard Critz, of the Supreme Court, and Harry N. Graves, of the Court of Criminal Appeals—face runoff races. Both were appointees of Gov. Alfred, who filled vacancies occurring on the courts. Graves had only a nominal lead (on an incomplete count made as this column was written) over Stephens, the adverse vote being regarded by many as a protest over Graves' appointment in spite of a delicate constitutional question of his eligibility. Judge Critz ran behind Davidson, who has one of the most potent names in Texas politics for a judicial candidate.

One Congressman—Maury Maverick of San Antonio, apparently met defeat at the hands of Paul Kilday, an Assistant District Attorney, who had the backing of Mayor Quinn's city machine—and two others, McFarlane of Wichita Falls, and Morgan Sanders, of the Third District, face runoff contests.

State Senator Joe Hill of Henderson won re-election against stiff opposition, and early reports here carried news of the defeat of the Senate's veteran conservative, Tom Holbrook of Galveston and of Eph Davis of Brownwood. Ross Hardin won by a clear majority for Senator in the Waco District.

Rogers Kelley, in the Valley District, appeared to lack only a few hundred votes for a clear majority over Lon Messer and Senator Jim Neal, who ran a poor second.

Returns were unofficial and incomplete as this column was written for transmission to subscribing newspapers by mail.

New headlines are in the making. They are not in type as yet. But editors will pick some of their biggest and blackest type when the story is ready.

Evidence is being collected. When pieced together it will grip the interest of every man and woman who cherishes America and its free institutions. It will show that foreign schisms and isms paid no attention to IT CAN'T HAPPEN HERE.

One of the many almost unbelievable stories which will be unfolded before the Dies committee is this: An investigator was threatened with kidnapping and bodily injury after he got a signed statement from the former head of a leading ism organization. That statement tells where the organization got its money and how it spent it.

—WS—

But to return to HEADLINES. The headlines did not tell all of the Howard Hughes flight. It was necessary to read between the lines to get the whole story. And this was the lasting part: It will make the name of Hughes live like that of Columbus. It's not that Hughes circled the world in so many days and that it took Columbus 70 days to cross the Atlantic which is important. People forget such details. But the thing which will live in history is that the Spirit of Individual Enterprise which drove Columbus on and on is still alive. A decade ago Lindbergh proved this spirit still lived in a period of prosperity. Hughes has shown that it survived a depression.

—WS—

And along this line an optimistic note has just come from a governmental agency. It shows that men are thinking not only for today but for TOMORROW. In a formal report the National Resources Committee takes a sharp thrust at those who view the future with "defeatist" eyes. This report refuses to concede that the future of American youth is the relief roll. In part the report says:

"One sort of approach to these situations, the defeatist approach, proceeds on the assumption that there is no longer enough work to be done to keep everyone fully occupied."

Then it enumerates the various forms of relief and adds:

"However, * * * there is good reason to believe that the Nation can well absorb all the economic goods that may be supplied through efficient organization and production and distribution, and the full participation of the whole population in effective enterprise or service of various sorts."

Efficient organization and production and distribution is what American industry has given the nation. It is the reason America has more bath tubs, more autos, more radios, more washing machines, more electric toasters and the like than any European nation. In most of those countries a one-man government tries to control and regulate production. It isn't working. It won't work. No

One of the laws of nature is habit. It was interesting to notice how many newspaper linotype operators around the country used to setting Washington stories with figures running into hundreds of millions and billions of DOLLARS, had trouble with the last crop report. When they got around to millions and billions of bushels of wheat and corn, many of them just automatically stuck "$" up in front of the figure. CLINIC A SUCCESS

Our Clinic held in Uvalde on the 21st day of July was a grand success. This honor of success did not go to Uvalde alone, but to each co-worker in the several counties doing their part. This has given us the most outstanding picture of facts regarding our Crippled Children in this entire area. The name of 314 cases were sent to me prior to the clinic. 168 cases were examined in the clinic. We did not touch more than 50 per cent of the Crippled Children in our counties. Can you see from this picture our task that is confronting us? We shall continue to cooperate and pool our every effort to gain correction and rehabilitation for every child that comes within our borders.

I want each and every one of you to know I have the fullest spirit of cooperation and shall prove to each of you the worthwhileness of such a program. I also want you to know how deeply I appreciate your work in aiding me in handling the vast number of cases covering such a wide area. We shall clasp hands in honor, work and results obtained and make one of this entire district.

HONDO FUTURE FARMERS RECEIVE LONE STAR FARMER DEGREES.

During the State Convention of Future Farmers which was held in El Paso last week-end, Arthur and Albert Lacy, of the Hondo Chapter of Future Farmers of America organization, were raised to the degree of Lone Star Farmers. One hundred and two Texas boys received this honor.

Golden keys were presented the Lone Star Farmers at a banquet given in their honor. Approximately 300 attended the banquet. The El Paso Chamber of Commerce gave the Future Farmers, teachers and guests a Mexican dinner as part of their many courtesies shown the Future Farmer Organizations during the convention.

Many places were visited by the delegates and guests, among the most historic was a visit to a mission in Ysleth which was built in 1762. It is supposed to be one of the first missions built in America.

As a climax to the convention the National Park Service played host to the delegates by giving them a free trip through the Carlsbad Caverns, one of the great wonders of the world. Many Future Farmers visited the Observatory which is located in the Davis Mountains.

We will hear more about Albert and Arthur when they make their application for the degree of American Farmers. This degree will be conferred in Kansas City at the National Convention. Albert and Arthur plan to attend the National Convention which will be held the latter part of August.

Hondo should feel very proud of these boys as their achievements are doing a great deal in advertising the town and school.

QUIHI NOTES

And, behold, the Lord stood above it, and said, I am the Lord God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac; the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed. Gen. 28:13.

Another part of Jacob's peculiar dream, defying all interpretation attempts by would-be authorities on dreams in their dream-books which still clutter the markets of cheap junk-literature for the gullible who still love to be fooled. Also the so-called scientific view of dreams fails to offer a satisfactory solution. Perhaps S. Freud in his often quoted "Psychoanalysis" (he, as many of his ilk, loves to hitch his little cart to big words) comes a little closer to a plausible explanation of many dreams. To him, dreams are the fulfillment of wishes. In children, he maintains, the dreams bring the wish undisguised and in direct representation, and so they dream outright of fairy kings and queens, of dwarfs and giants, of uniforms and dresses, of beaus and belles, of love and adventure or whatever they wish to see or be or possess. Adults, however, he continues, remain even in sleep under the pressure of a social training to repress and censor the expression of their wishes, so that the wish can be represented in the dream only in symbolical or allegorical form. About this is the sum and substance of Freud's theory. Will that be the right appraisal of Jacob's dream? Hardly. Jacob may have had "repressed wishes" on that journey, thinking of protection, guardian angels or similar ideas, thinking also of "the God of our fathers" for the same purpose, and of other promises given before to the forefathers about land and offspring and future blessings and their realization in a general way; and the allegoric or figurative interpretation of the dream by some sermonizers may have fascinating points, to wit: God stands above all; He has not made this world and then withdrew, leaving it to its own resources and fate (as deists have it), but He remains in close connection with it by a picturesque ladder, the thoughts and prayers and revelations, and by the ascending and descending angels, his messengers, delivering His special messages down here and reporting their observations on earth back to headquarters, etc. But that misses the heart of the matter, of the dream. A fugitive, and guilty at that, hardly wishes for the searching police, nor for a holy, scrutinizing God, nor hopes for a premium on crime, renewed promises of God nor was the man, as far as we know, personally living in such a pronounced religious atmosphere where the dream would fit in and release some of those repressed religious wishes. So Freud's theory also here hits beside the mark. This dream is in a class by itself. It is not man-made but God-made. Believe it or not, it is a mode of God's revelation occurring here and there in the old testament and even at the threshold of the New (Joseph, Daniel, Joel, Mary's husband, etc.) lifting the veil of the future, giving warning, directions, comfort, providential developments, and stressing particular phases of His kingdom. Only sporadically, few and far between, it occurred and then passed out for good, with the visible manifestations and revelations (as Abraham had them when the Lord or angels appeared incarnate, in human shape and form), with the visions and prophetic predictions. The Jewish Talmud, perhaps in playful banter, calls the Sabbath the sixtieth part of heavenly glory; fire, the sixtieth part of hell-torment, and dreams, the sixtieth part of divine prophecies. The mathematical proportion may be imaginary, but it correctly appraises the rather low stage of revelations given by dreams, but they had their time and their importance. Only such view measures up to Jacob's dream, and its fulfillment, grand and glorious, is infallible proof.

Vacation time is at the door. The advance guard from here has left for various points in Arizona last Sunday, bright and early. The Messrs. John G. Bohlen, Roy Bohlen, Ehme Saathoff and Mrs. Saathoff were in the party. Hope they were able to out-speed the raging waters that inundated many roads on or near their route. And may they find more moderate temperatures than we enjoy at the present.

All is quiet at the front. No news. May it mean good news all around in this world of sickness and accidents and freakish happenings. Also the political front is quiet again, after the usual barrage of speeches and promises and utopian prospects. There are plenty of left-overs for several more campaigns. And Texas will outshine all other states with the new man at the helm and his music, if music does the trick.

On August the 4th the members of the Ladies' Aid will meet at the usual hour. The hostesses are Mrs. George Balzen, Mrs. Otto Neuman and a courageous volunteer that we hope will show up. Try to arrange your home schedule so you can be with us, and try to bring your friend or kin or neighbor that wait for your invitation.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Heath and Capt. and Mrs. C. D. Eddleman and son, Jackie, left early Wednesday morning for a motor trip through West Texas to the Carlsbad Cavern in New Mexico. Enroute they plan to pay a short visit to Dr. and Mrs. Orville Graham and children in Del Rio.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Franklin of Houston, Texas, were brief visitors in Hondo Saturday. Mr. Franklin is a brother-in-law of Mr. Joseph Coulter and spent many happy boyhood days visiting his sister in Castroville. Yielding to the urge to come back to those happy scenes, he and Mrs. Franklin were spending a few days there.

Mrs. J. H. Burgin and daughters, Misses Dorothy and Helen, have returned home from vacationing in the Pike's Peak territory, the Yellow Stone National Park, and back home by way of Salt Lake City, the Grand Canyon, Painted Desert and Petrified Forest of Arizona and the Carlsbad Cavern of New Mexico. They report a very enjoyable trip without any mishap of any nature.

J. J. Russell was a business caller at this office Friday and moved up his date another notch. Mr. Russell is one farmer who took a chance on his corn recovering from the late April freeze, and is glad he did. He says corn will recover from a freeze when only the leaves are damaged, but when it is severe enough to injure the bud the plants often sucker out and do not yield much corn.

Business with the paper brought George Zimmerle of the Biry community to this office Tuesday. In each other, he and the M. E. recognized each other as former pupil and teacher. The M. E. taught the San Geronimo school during the term of 1898-'99, and George was one of the middle-sized boys. Neither could recall having seen the other since George's last day at school, now nearly forty years ago.

Mrs. J. M. Finger was hostess to the Ladies' Bridge Club Tuesday afternoon. Prizes were awarded Mrs. L. E. Heath for high score, to Mrs. Harmon Hubert for second, and to Mrs. C. D. Eddleman for high guest. Refreshments of potato salad, salines, cookies and iced tea were served to the following: Mesdames L. J. Fricks, L. E. Heath, C. D. Eddleman, Harmon Hubert, Robert Kollman, O. B. Taylor, Fletcher Davis, A. H. Schweers and J. M. Finger.

LEGACIES.

"I am no dead depository," I said in scornful pride. "My forbears had no golden glory To leave me when they died."

I am what I am with self-given dower; For myself I alone provide." I forgot that I used full many a power Bestowed by an ageless tide.

For energy, health, and strength I am debtor To those of long ago. For inspiration, in grateful fetter I am bound to some, I know.

And the faith that sustains me, a frail, stumbling mortal, By martyrs and saints of yore Was borne on swift wings through Heaven's wide portal With Christ and His mother before.

Again the holy chiming bells Will signify 'tis Easter day; The verdure in the fields and dells, Reveal to us, it soon is May.

Then soon again it will be June, When nature's charm will reign supreme; The fragrant world beneath the moon Is lulled to rest, by its soft beam.

On those nights endowed with beauty All pious hearts are filled with love; The whole world, in blissful duty Appealingly, sends prayers above.

God's glory then is manifest, And every burden I dismiss, I feel that by Him I am blest, While dreaming of Eternal bliss.

LOCAL SUPERVISORS OF FSA TO ATTEND CONFERENCE.

The office of the Farm Security Administration in Hondo will be closed the week of August 1 and opened again August 8, Tom Johnson, county rural supervisor, announced today. The entire county personnel will be in College Station during the week for the annual state meeting of FSA employees, he said.

The keynote of the conference will be "Farm security means work for every member of the family every day in the year," Mr. Johnson said. "The Farm Security Administration is concentrating its attack upon the one-crop system," the supervisor went on. "All farm and home plans accepted by FSA must show several sources of cash income. It is not only desirable that there be several sources of income, but also that the income be received at frequent intervals, instead of the old one pay day a year."

The rural supervisor and Miss Mauldin, county home management supervisor, have been appointed on special committees to make recommendations based on their work in Medina County concerning the future policies and procedures of the Farm Security Administration. These recommendations will be presented at the meeting and passed through the state and regional offices to the national executives in Washington.

Final details of procedure for the 1939 program will be ironed out at the meeting, and steps to get next year's loans planned and approved well in advance of the new crop year will be taken immediately upon the reopening of the office, Mr. Johnson indicated.

tion in the House, near the end of the last session, which marks the start of an aggressive drive to help restore prosperity through sound tax revision.

Mr. Celler has long been favorably known for his efforts to repeal or at least mitigate these two "job-killing taxes"—the capital gains tax and the undistributed profits tax. His joint resolution proposes the repeal of the Constitutional Amendment authorizing the income tax and the substitution of a new amendment reading: "The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several states, and without regard to any census or enumeration: Provided, That in no case shall the maximum rate of tax exceed 25 per centum."

"The maximum rate of any tax, duty or excise which Congress may lay and collect with respect to the devolution or transfer of property, or any interest therein, upon or in contemplation of death, or by way of gift, shall in no case exceed 25 per centum."

Excessively high taxation is a major factor in creating and prolonging depression for business, industry, agriculture and labor. You can't take away the bulk of a man's profits if an enterprise succeeds and leave him holding the sack if it fails, and expect him to take the investment risks that are essential to employment and industrial development. Thus, the present income tax rates, with the surtax running in excess of 80 per cent, are the worst possible barriers to recovery.

Mr. Celler states that he introduced his resolution to start controversy and public thinking on the tax question. If it does that, it will pave the way for tax revision and reform that will go a long way toward leading us out of the economic woods.—Industrial News Review.

THAT "GENERAL FEELING" AGAIN.

The recent improvement in security values, after many months of disheartening declines, has been received with mixed sentiment. Under normal conditions, the gains would be regarded as the start of an upward cycle. But under the abnormal conditions prevailing today, there is a strong and well-grounded fear that the gains will be merely temporary, and that they constitute only a flurry of no real significance.

In other words, what the country lacks today is confidence. That "general feeling" of uncertainty and worry is as strong as it ever was, and perhaps stronger. Millions of people feel much as if they were living above a volcano that might erupt at any moment. There is no stability. And to say that this sentiment is unjustified, as some of the politicians do, is claptrap.

The tax problem has barely been touched. The national debt, in spite of past promises to reduce it, scars to new record after new record. More labor troubles are imminent. The government, instead of encouraging productive private business, has continued with its inimical policies, and it threatens to go further into business on its own hook, at the expense of existing private investments. "The Store for all Generations"

THE EDITOR'S TURN-ROW

The editor of FARMING is pleased to acknowledge receipt of an invitation from President T. O. Walton of the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas to attend the Annual Farmers' Short Course at College Station on July 13-14-15, and the Press Panquet on the night of July 14. The writers will be domiciled in the newly enlarged hospital building for the three days, and those fortunate enough to attend will no doubt take away with them much of the inspiration and information generated and developed at the great gathering. No writer for the rural people of Texas should willingly miss it.

—oO—

This issue of FARMING completes its sixteenth volume. "Sweet sixteen" to a maiden is the zenith of girlhood beauty; to an agricultural journal it is a hoary old age as compared to the average life of such enterprises. FARMING can neither boast the maidenly loveliness of "sweet sixteen" nor plead the homage due to age. It still pleads the awkwardness of gawky youth and trusts the pains it must endure are only growing pains. So if you can't love us at least help us grow, and perhaps we will grow into a thing of usefulness in which you will not be ashamed of having had a part. As our friends are to us in helpfulness so can we be in useful service. Our day and generation needs an independent, outspoken press; its existence depends upon you.

—oO—

Texas is in the mid-heat of a political campaign the like of which has probably never been seen before. With thirteen aspirants seeking the governorship, interest in that race has overshadowed almost to obscurity all other races. In the governor's race, there appears to be a steady and carefully planned build-up of two men for the purpose of placing the two in the run-off together. These men are openly charged by certain of their opponents with being financed by the same selfish, favor-seeking interest in an effort to eliminate all opposition and win their purpose with either man in a sort of a "heads I win, tails you lose" arrangement. The accusation looks so well founded that it should give every well intentioned voter concern. Shall the great boon of self-government be sacrificed through our indifference to its preservation?

—oO—

When FARMING saw a "corner" on the money and credit resources of the country in 1930 concentrating the money of the country in the hands of the few and out of the reach of the ordinary citizen; when we saw the scarcity of cash and credit facilities sapping the life out of many business enterprises, causing failure, unemployment and want to stalk the land; when we saw the government, yielding to the importunities to come to the relief of the needy, borrowing from these same money hoarders and giving them interest-bearing, non-taxable bonds for the privilege of using its own credit; when we could see the motive behind the man-made and "planned-that-way" depression—to get the wealth of organized greed invested in non-taxable property and give them a firmer strangle-hold on the finances of the country, it was then we said that there are just two ways to end the depression. One was to defy the financiers and issue national currency until the corner on finances was broken. The other alternative was to give the bond cormorants all the bonds they wanted and induce them to permit finance to flow in normal flood through regular channels. No one has had the courage or honesty to attempt the former. Does the reputed upturn of business mean the cormorants are satiated and are ready to let us "put on a little fat" before taking us to another rendering? No other basic cause for a rise out of the depression is visible.

What has come over the spirit of the Hearst newspapers? For several years they have been the most consistent and persistent critics of the New Deal. That their criticism was well founded seems to have been amply borne out by the fact that one of their corporations recently defaulted in payment of its regular dividends to the holders of certain of its stock, and the chief reason assigned for such default was the excessive taxes mulcted from the properties. But a new vision has lately come over the spirit of their dreams. Whence comes the assurance voiced in the following opening paragraphs of a recent front-page editorial, presumably from Hearst's own pen: "The higher commands of government and business, united at last in an alliance against unemployment and want, are launching a concerted and mighty attack upon the economic evils that have too long threatened the nation. [Where is the evidence of such alliance?] Government will spend many thousands of millions of dollars in public works and loans. [Billions of blood money wrung from an already tax - enslaved people!] Government has pledged itself no longer to harass, hamper and intimidate business. It has invited business to its councils, extended the hand of friendship and co-operation. Business, relieved from persecution and fear, has promised to maintain wages, increase production, stimulate consumption, put more men to work." [Why not add, pay its pledged dividends to its stockholders?] In the light of this, after what has passed, one wonders who led Mr. Hearst up onto the mountain, what bait lured him to climb thereon, who showed him this wonderful vision, and just how much dependence, at this late date, can be placed in the "pledges" for which he vouches!

—oO—

People who would angrily resent being called a socialist are often heard condemning "Capitalism" unreservedly. What they mean to condemn is not capitalism but the abuses that have grown out of it. The man who makes an ear of corn grow where none grew before is entitled to the corn. So long as he retains possession of it he is a capitalist and his capital is the ear of corn. Who would condemn him would deny him the reward of his skill and industry and destroy his incentive to enterprise. That way lies stagnation, demoralization, death. What is to be condemned is the practice of creating capitalists by permitting others, through sharp practices, to deprive him of his corn without giving him its equivalent value in a free and fair exchange—robbing him through taxes to subsidize others, forcing him to pay excessive prices for the enrichment of tariff beneficiaries, and so on ad infinitum. Let us search all things and hold fast to that which is good!

—oO—

The nature faking policy of obtaining more by producing less is not working satisfactorily. As hours of labor are pushed down and wages are pushed up the prices of the products are pushed up, and this increases living costs. Then wages must be raised again to keep up with living costs. But this increases living costs again, and this makes another raise in wages necessary and so on ad infinitum. As the prices of the thing the farmer must buy are pushed up by increased labor cost, the farmer must produce less in order to increase the prices of agricultural products, and this, of course, will increase the cost of living and make additional increase in wages necessary. The administration's economic policy of attempting to make both ends of the see-saw go up together at the same time, it is believed, will not succeed. The economic effects of this perpetual motion stunt are hidden from the rank and file by the enormous use of social narcotics.—Prof. Gus W. Dyer.

A PIONEER PASSES

In newspaper parlance, "Thirty" has come to a much loved newspaper friend of this editor. It is in sorrow too deep for words to express that we record the passing of one whose loss we all shall mourn. Col. R. R. Claridge died at 10 o'clock on the morning of June 10, 1938, at the home of a step-son at Trinity, Texas, and was buried at his late home at Salmon, Texas. Advancing age had enfeebled his health but never robbed him entirely of his unflagging energy. Death came to him peacefully as he sat in a rocking chair, touched him gently and his mortal career that had been so actively spent was no more.

Born in Illinois in 1851, on the 22nd day of February, he had passed his 87th year. Brought to Texas in early childhood, he grew up to be a Texan to the core. Fifty years or more ago, he pioneered in the state's agricultural journalism, being one of the founders of the old Texas Stockman and Farmer of San Antonio. Later Claridge's Stockfarmer of that city was almost entirely the work of his own hands. His journalistic work attracted the attention of the Gould railroad interests in Texas, and for several of the most active years of his life he was employed by them in their industrial and public relations service. This took him away from Southwest Texas and wedded him to the wooded hills and valleys of East Texas, beneath whose much-loved bosom his mortal remains now sleep.

Our intimate friendship came in the later years of his life when both of us were employed for several years in the State Department of Agriculture of Texas, under Commissioner Fred W. Davis, and worked side by side for a common interest in the office from June, 1919, to January, 1921. Though in different capacities, he was Statistician and Publicist for the Department, it was our great privilege to often assist him, to learn much from his vast experience and mature judgment, and to succeed to the position he had held when he left the Department's employ, including the editing of the Department's publication, the News Bulletin, a monthly resume of Department activities, which had been his special pride and pleasure.

The work he has done for Farming for the past 16 years has been a labor of love, and while our readers will miss his pungent paragraphs, the last of which appear in this issue and which were being put into type about the time death was stilling the hand that penned them, we will miss far more sadly the great, generous spirit of his friendship and helpful kindness. There is no substitute for a friend, and his passing leaves a void as eternal and ever-present as time that ever passes but is never gone.

But recently, our friend had contemplated a series of articles for Farming, dealing with his reminiscences of his life in Texas. Remembering what a marvelous era of change that life had spanned, how keen he was in observation of the passing events, how clear and accurate he was in evaluating things as they were, and what marvelous facility he had for telling his story, can one be wholly selfish in his feeling of loss that death has decreed that the story is never to be told?

So as we read elsewhere in this paper what is probably the last written comments to come from his fertile brain, we are face to face with the terrible finality of death. We can in some degree of composure give back to Mother Earth this worn-out garment that has clothed our conscious being, can be content that it again mingle with the dust from which it was builded, but—

"Dust thou art, to dust returnest"
Was not spoken of the Soul.

And that strange, imponderable impulse called Faith bids trembling Hope expect, beyond the darkness that covers our finite senses, the light of a perfect understanding, in that vast, limitless realm where all speculation ceaseth and we shall know the perfect truth. If realization of that dream has been his, we know that that generous, loyal and ever active, helpful spirit has found for its utmost joyful expansion "plenty of room," to quote his words, in a realm that is boundless and eternal.

MY SUNNY SOUTHERN HOME.

O, carry me back to Virginia,
The place where I was born;
To dear ole Mammy Jennie,
Who e'er smiles and softly croons,
Where the little pickaninnies
Roll on the cabin floor
And the blue grass of Virginia
Waves by the cottage door.

O, carry me back to Virginia,
To my sunny Southern Home,
To the fields of cotton blossoms;
'Tis the place I love to roam,
Where the honeysuckle's climbing
Around the old elm tree;
'Tis there that my heart is a pining,
'Tis there I wait for thee.

O, carry me back! You'll not forget!
The Sun is sinking low,
I'm longing now as ever
For my old Virginia home;
Round the cot the bees are humming,
Birds sweetly sing to me,
But there's none so rare or sweet or fair
As my dear home with thee.

TO A LITTLE OLD LADY.

Dear little old lady sitting there,
All cuddled up in your rocking chair,
Your earthly, and heavenly hemisphere
Are linked with the vision of yesteryears,
As upon your wrinkled face appears Sometimes a smile, or a frown, or tears.

And we who are young, whose years
are few,
How much we could learn if only we knew
Each turn in your mental avenue—
What marvelous vistas are open to you!
People they say you are finished and through,
But what would your Johnny or Mary do
Without Granny to tell their troubles to,
Getting advice and her point of view?

—LOUISA ELL POE,

NEIGHBOR'S GARDEN.

The neighbors have a garden rich with bloom.

The honeysuckle lifts a coral spray
Above the latticed fence and mingles with
A bird of paradise in gold array.

Beyond the garden wall, with scarlet flares

That interlace the green, a trumpet vine

Is like a flaming tapestry that hangs
From the top-most branch of a stately pine.

Such loveliness awakes within, a thrill
That only nature's beauty can impart;

And lends each new-born day the cheer I need

To meet a waiting task with lighter heart.

THE FAIRY RING.

Through the autumn woodlands,
Down beyond the spring,
Little elfin dancers,
Whirling in a ring.

Cap of flame or crimson—
Gown of silver lace—
"Bow to your partner!"
"Curtsey in your place!"

The pines sifted shadows
With flaked moonlight,
While stars lit their candles
At the fire-flies' light.

Wind played the fiddle,
Bull-frog the bass;
Tree-toad and Whip-poor-Will Set a merry pace.

All were so happy—
Never knew the hour—
Dew-diamonds crowned the head
Of every sleeping flower—

Mad-cap fays and goblins,
Whirling down the night,
Froze into the "Fairy Ring"
At dawn's first light.

—D. SEIBEL.

WELCOME TO THE ROYAL HAWAIIANS.

Welcome, Harry Owens, and your band;
We hope you find America grand.
You have traveled from afar
To bring us music way above par,
To bring us Hawaiian romance
And swell tunes to which we may dance,
To bring us sweet, strumming
guitars,
And the best of singing stars.
On the world's magic carpet we fly,
For your Royal Hawaiians bring us
blue sky,
The sea, Hawaii, and a bit of beach;
So we extend good wishes to all and each.

PLEASURE LIES IN PURSUING.

'Tis not the peach on the lower limb
That you've only to reach and take it Nor the mellow peach that falls in your lap
The very minute you shake it.

Ah, no, it's the peach at the top of the tree
That's always the biggest and sweetest

And the game we all are trying to catch

Is the game that runs the fleetest,
For pleasure lies in pursuing
Not in obtaining the game we seek
For then we may be ruing.

Sancta Maria,
Purest of women;
Sancta Maria,
Mother and Heaven's Queen;
O, hear my prayer to thee:
Lead me to rightful paths,
That's just, and equitable;
O Virgin, guide me unscathed—
In time of stark havoc,
And war, so horrible;
O Mary, do mitigate
My sorrows and aching heart,
Alleviate the grasps of fate
That's tearing my heart apart.
Sancta Maria!
Hear my cry!
See tearful eyes!
I beg thee forever to
Be, by me,
Sancta Maria.

FOR SOUL'S HEARTH FIRE.

It is well when they are in need
That we give our neighbors the things
On which their bodies may feed;
And at times life's trouble-stings
May be salved by thoughtfully kind
Looks and words, we find.

But I wonder if it may be
That invisible gifts of the soul,
Spirit gifts we never can see,
Which would help folks reach the goal
Of desire, we are giving too,—
Just by what we DO.

If by always doing our best—
Meeting bravely our every test,
Not alone with courage, but cheer
Spread around for all who come near,
We may give what others require
For the soul's hearth fire!

—LILLIAN M. SVENSON.

A PLEA.

O World, forget the errors please,
I make as I pass by;
Mistakes that may cause someone
pain,
Or maybe tearful eye.

O World, don't hold them as a wrong,
They're not intended things;
To do and think just what is right
Will keep my heart on wings.

So World, remember, won't you please,

My prayers and dreams all blend,
That I may leave a record clear
Of harm to foe or friend.

—MALOY BYRNS,

AN APRIL DUSK.

An April day was slowly dying
In the dusk over Washington Square,
Wrapping the arch in airy streamers flying
Strands of a spectral Witch-Man's hair.

I walked with a poet-woman there
Through embered, pulsing, April dusk;
She was young and wonderously fair,
Part of the springtime bloom and musk.

Wisely she spoke of the Darwin script
(A doctrine mixing monkeys with men),
Saying it was proved, and thereby stript
Mystery from life, leaving reason to ken

Processes mechanical, safe and sure;
Building a molecule up to the fool
Who cherishes within the will to endure
His own elimination — by the fittest rule.

The mind of her was a splendid thing,
Sweeping the strings of a wonderful lyre,
Voicing thro' murk the music of spring;
From Winter's wreck, the summers
afire

In fields engulfed in a sea of bloom.
The rapturous beauty of plant and weed,
With variant colors, bearing soft perfume,
Serving no causative or primordial need.

Ah me, I was young, and she likewise,
And vacant of wisdom, I was then—
as now!
I proposed, together, we might win
the skies
(A fervid, prometian, metaphorical vow.)

I meant it too and devoutly believed
That there and then I had discovered the key—
Tho' Jeremiah, Omar and Job had grieved—
The cure of all ills was revealed to me.

There in the Square she told me nay;
That she was pledged and wedded to art—
Later she chose a more direct way,
Marrying millions, thus getting a start.

She graces a throne such as Fame provides
For the worthy—worthiest truly is she.
Darwin wins or loses, who walks, who rides?
A bench in the park again calls to me.

—DAVID W. CADE.

PROOF OF IMMORTALITY.

The flowers their endless cycles trace
From beauty back to earth;
And in each duplicate spring unfold
In ecstasies of birth . . .
Within my mind there is no doubt
And in my heart no fear,
For God, and the flowers, and I are one,
Forever companioned here.

—JACKIE DRAGONETTI ROMERO

CASPER GOU CAUGHT IN LAKE LAST WEEK.

Alex Mangold and daughter, Constantine, while up from the lake Friday, made our office a pleasant call. Mr. Mangold told us that a party from Louisiana caught a 2 1/2-lb. gasper gou while fishing at his resort last week. This is the first gasper gou ever known to have been caught in Medina Lake.

GAME WARDENS MUST WEAR UNIFORMS.

A new official state uniform will soon be on display over Texas—the game warden's uniform.

Secretary Will Tucker of the Game, Fish and Oyster Commission, announced that the uniforms would be installed.

The new uniforms are forest green in color, and wardens may wear with them, either service hats or caps similar to those worn by army officers.

Each warden will be required to wear a Sam Brown belt.—The Bandera New Era.

Among those attending the boat races at Medina Dam Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. J. H. FENCE INCREASES THE FEED SUPPLY.

By T. C. Richardson, Secretary Breeder-Feeder Association

It is easy to see an extra stack of hay in the barnyard, but many a potential extra stack escapes notice because it is scattered over the farm, in fence corners, along the branch, or grows in crop fields after they are laid by. No farmer would let it burn or blow away if he could see it all in one pile; he would reach for his shotgun if anyone threatened to take it away without paying for it. There is only one way to save such odds and ends of grain or forage, which is to let livestock do the harvesting. Whether it is crab grass in the cornfield, shattered grain in the oatfield, bermuda or native grass in unplowed nooks and crannies, it is meat, milk or wool in the raw.

A stock-tight fence around a single field so that it can be grazed may easily be worth more than an extra stack of hay in the barnyard. Not only is the labor of harvesting avoided; not only is feed saved which cannot otherwise be used; the humus is left on the land in the manure; every day that the animals feed themselves is one less day of serving it to them on a pitchfork. The time it takes to build a fence will shorten the chores for many a year.

The division of the farm into three or four sections for systematic rotation of crops is the first essential of good farm management. The present agricultural adjustment act conforms to this principle of management in designating "soil depleting" and "soil conserving" crops, leaving permanent pastures and the remainder of the cultivated land in a different category. But crop rotations cannot be fully utilized to the best advantage without livestock and poultry; livestock cannot be kept most efficiently and economically unless

J. W. BOGGUS CLAIMED BY DEATH.

Following an illness of some three months' duration, James William they have access to each part of the farm whenever it supplies feed which they can harvest for themselves; and every field and pasture can be grazed only when it is properly fenced.

It would be highly desirable to fence the entire farm at once, after carefully planning for convenience and permanency, but not every farmer can do this. Since we must set up a rotation system, however, to receive the benefits of the national farm act, and good business judgment requires that we make the most of the rotation both in the interest of immediate income and of permanent productivity, we can begin by fencing at least one field a year until the entire farm is subdivided.

A few years ago Jack Shelton added a farm flock of sheep to Luling Foundation farm's productive capacity by the simple expedient of fencing in a creek which wound its way through the cultivated fields. Enough grass grew on its sloping banks and in its sharp bends to keep the sheep, and incidentally, they kept down the weeds which formerly served only to seed the nearby plow land.

Not only the land is benefited by rotation and livestock grazing, but livestock itself, especially hogs, sheep and poultry, thrive better when they can be "rotated"—shifted from place to place. This calls for hog-tight and sheep-proof fence, which may be either full cattle-high woven wire or woven wire 26 to 35 inches high with barbed wires above. There is not much difference in the cost if the barbed wire must be bought new.

Before building permanent fences it is well worth while to sit down and plat the farm on paper. It is important that when the plan is completed every field will have access to water, and that they center as nearly as practicable to the homestead and barnyard in order to save time in cultural and harvesting operations.

Let's fence at least one field this year. Get that extra stack of hay.

Poggus, a resident of Uvalde 18 years, died at his farm home south of the city Tuesday. Funeral services were conducted at the Carl Vess Co. chapel Wednesday afternoon by Rev. E. A. Osborne, minister of the High Street Christian Church. Interment was in the Uvalde cemetery.

He came to Texas in 1880 locating at Gainesville, where he resided some seven years and there on Dec. 8, 1887, he was married to Miss Ann Stowe. They observed their fiftieth wedding anniversary on Dec. 8, 1937. Following their marriage they resided in Oklahoma several years, and returned to Texas in 1904, settling at Hale Center. They came to Uvalde in 1920 and had resided here since. He was the father of ten children, nine of whom survive. A daughter, Mrs. Steve Greene, died in 1929.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by the following children: Mrs. J. J. Lindsey, Uvalde; Mrs. Walter Coffee, Hale Center; A. J. Boggus, Hondo; W. R. Boggus, Riverside, Calif.; Mrs. D. R. Baird, Uvalde; Mrs. R. L. Galloway, Houston; Mrs. J. I. Reed, Silver, Texas; Mrs. L. K. O'Reilly, Delhi, Calif.; Mrs. P. C. Maxson, Exeter, Calif. CARNATION CONTENTED COW IS HIGHEST RECORD LIVING HOLSTEIN.

When Carnation Prospect Ormsby Gluck, a registered Holstein cow, completed her yearly official test on April 15th, she became the highest record living cow for butterfat yield of all ages and breeds in the United States. Her production according to the Holstein-Friesian Association of America, Madison, Wisconsin, was 1225.4 pounds of fat and 33,347.7 pounds of milk with an average test of 3.7 per cent. Only two cows of the breed have ever exceeded this butterfat yield. As her name would imply she was bred and is owned by the Carnation Milk Farms, Seattle, Washington. Her sire, Carnation Segis Prospect, is a son of the famous world's record milk cow, Segis Pieterje Prospect, with a yield of 37,381.4 pounds of milk and 1158.9 pounds of fat. A sister to "Gluck" by the same sire is the world's champion living milk producer, Carnation Prospect Veeman, with a record of 36,859.4 pounds of milk and 1070.2 pounds of fat. The mother of "Gluck" is a daughter of Matador Segis Walker, who has 183 daughters admitted to Advanced Registry and who is also a half-brother to Segis Pieterje Prospect. Thus we see that "Gluck's" pedigree is packed full of high producing ancestors. Those who have seen this phenomenal cow agree that she is excellent in type. At the close of her test she weighed well over a ton. "Gluck" is the 204th Holstein-Friesian cow to top the thousand pound fat mark and the 147th to exceed 30,000 pounds of milk.

From the seed crushed was produced 355,034.209 pounds of crude oil, 572,260 tons of cake and meal, 319,447 tons of hulls and 250,435 running bales of lint.

World-Wide Moderation Growth Shown By Brewing Statistics

International reports show that 35 nations have increased production of beer and ale since 1933, in the wake of world-wide developments favoring beer as the beverage of moderation.

WORLD-WIDE increase in beer and ale consumption has kept pace with temperance education advocating use of the beverage of moderation and sobriety, according to the latest international production figures obtained from European sources by the United Brewers Industrial Foundation. The official figures, after a final checkup, will be published by the League of Nations. The greatest increases have been recorded in those countries where the promotion of beer's temperate qualities has been most widespread and effective. This is particularly true in the United States and European countries, especially the British Isles, where a rise of more than 5,600,000 barrels was reported for 1937 over 1933. Soviet Russia, which has fought for temperance on a broad scale in recent years, increased its beer production by 72 per cent in four years and Mexico, engaging in similar effort, added 128 per cent to beer production in five years.

100 per cent since 1933. Countries that increased production over 50 per cent included the United States (since 1934), Finland, Canada, Soviet Russia, Brazil, Lithuania, Latvia, Greece, Guatemala, Chile and Peru.

Countries with over 25 per cent increase were Argentina, Australia, New Zealand, Italy, Hungary, Estonia, Poland, Union of South Africa and Belgian Congo. Countries that increased output up to 25 per cent were United Kingdom, Germany, Denmark, Ireland, Norway, Sweden, Japan, Portugal, Bulgaria, Luxembourg, Uruguay, Egypt and Czechoslovakia.

The figures published by the Brewers Foundation show that the United States, re-established as the world's largest producer and consumer of beer following re-alization in 1933, is steadily expanding its position, producing 58,748,087 barrels for the reporting period 1937. The next largest producers and consumers of beer were (in order) Germany, United Kingdom, Belgium and France.
